Becky Lomax first saw the Northern Lights dancing green and white in Yellowstone s night sky.

Yellowstone is also the first place she heard elk bugle, skied past steaming hot springs and geysers and drove up the road inside a herd of migrating bison. No matter what season, Yellowstone and Grand Teton captivate her. After teaching high school English outside Seattle, Becky moved to Montana, where she served as a hiking and backpacking guide, worked at a ski resort, and began to write about the outdoors. She has spent more than two decades exploring the Northern Rockies, including Yellowstone and Grand Teton National Parks. Through her writing, Becky advocates for the conservation of wild places. She has written about hiking trails and historic lodges, camping and climate change and has tagged along with biologists into the field to radio-collar bighorn sheep and grizzly bears. Becky serves as the western editor for OnTheSnow.com, reporting on the news for ski resorts. She also writes frequently for regional newspapers and magazines and has published stories in "Smithsonian" and "Backpacker." She is the author of "Moon Glacier National Park" and "Moon Montana, Wyoming, & Idaho Camping."

My husband and I just visited Yellowstone and Tetons and of all the maps and everything we had we used this the most! Packed with info on everything. We loved the maps and the descriptions of places we could visit. Made our trip more enjoyable.

Moon are my new favorite guides. Color throughout and full of local information, not hotel and restaurant reviews.

I always purchase a Moon travel guide before traveling. I wouldn't travel without one. This one met every expectation.

Informative

Using for our trip this summer, exactly what I needed.

Good info.

The print is VERY SMALL in this book. It is too small to read easily. I think there is great information in the book but I just wish the print was bigger.
