Delaplaine lives on South Beach, Miami's Billion Dollar Sandbar. He writes in widely varied fields: screenplays, novels (adult and juvenile) and journalism. He also has a series of Long Weekend Guides covering some 70 cities around the world. Email: andrewdelaplaine@mac.com He writes several series: The "JACK HOUSTON ST. CLAIR" political thriller novels. "THE ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES IV," a series of novels starring the great-great-grandson of the famous consulting detective. "THE ANNALS OF SANTOPIA" series, an epic that follows a Santa born in 1900 through to his death 82 years later. The AMOS FREEMAN police thrillers. Other novels: "The Trap Door" follows a boy who is taken back in time to 1594 and Shakespeare's Globe Theatre. "The Meter Maid Murders," a comic look at a detective trying to nab a serial killer on South Beach who only murders meter maids. Has written and directed three features (one doc, two narrative features), and won several awards for his film work. (See imdb.com for details). His latest film, "Meeting Spencer," starring Jeffrey Tambor, won the prestigious Milan International Film Festival Award for Best Screenplay. This book was a little light on detail ... and really could have used some neighborhood maps at a minimum. It was pretty much impossible to tell which attractions were in close proximity to one another. At the end of the day, it was one person's idea of the highlights ... focused a lot more on sports than I would have anticipated. There are not very many guidebooks on Memphis, which has been a disappointment to me to begin with. This one is definitely not my first choice for my upcoming trip.

Great book

Very abbreviated and lacking in real detail. Substance of text could fit on about 8 to 10 pages; published in large font and spaced out to stretch the content. A travel book should go beyond one could find with a few clicks of a mouse. The only reason I'm not returning it is that's too much of bother. There's a reason the words "long weekend" are in the title. Oh well, live and learn.
