Customer Reviews

This compact book offers a wealth of collection-development guidance regarding multicultural literature for children and teens, and notably includes the LGBTQ perspective as well.

Recommended for the neophyte youth services collection-development librarian or for those seeking to update a youth collection to reflect patron diversity, this book is a handy companion that incorporates thoughtful reflections on the historical context of diversity within youth literature (or the lack thereof) into 13 easy-to-digest chapters. Other features include literature lists, an index, and a "Further Reading" reference section, which presents additional articles, books, and online resources to expand and ensure high-quality purchases from the canon of children's literature.

literature written for and by those reflecting diverse backgrounds. --Joslyn Jones

Jamie Campbell Naidoo is an associate professor at the University of Alabama's School of Library and Information Studies and founder of the National Latino Children's Literature Conference. He teaches and researches in the areas of early childhood literacy, multicultural and international children's literature, and diversity in librarianship. He is a former children's librarian and school librarian, and his current research specializes in public library services and programs to Latino children and library services for LGBTQ families. He is a member of REFORMA and has served on numerous children's book award committees. Celebrating Cuentos: Promoting Latino Children's Literature and Literacy into Classrooms and Libraries, edited by Naidoo, was published in 2010. His latest book, Rainbow Family Collections: Selecting and Using Children's Books with Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, and Queer Content, was published in 2012. Sarah Park Dahlen is an assistant professor of library and information science at St. Catherine University in St. Paul, Minnesota. She teaches courses in library materials for children and young adults, library services for youth, storytelling, and introduction to library and information science. Her research interests include representations of the Korean diaspora in children's literature, children's librarianship, transracial adoption, social justice, and Korean diasporic history. She has served on several children's book award committees and is currently serving as the chair of the Asian/Pacific American Librarians Association's Literature Awards Committee for Children's Literature.

This book was a true breath of fresh air and I felt empowered to recommend to others particular "diverse youth literature" titles/authors/illustrators after reading. I will keep this book close by for a long time - as a reference for what to consider when choosing books that represent certain groups and for authors/illustrators who are notable for creating culturally responsive/accurate books for children and youth. And yet it's not that easy - the authors do not provide check lists - they provide a lot of room for thinking instead. It's a pricey book - but will have lasting value.
